

Vincent Robert Duffy died in Colorado on August 11, 2017. "Duffy" was born in Paterson, New Jersey, and prepared for Princeton at St. Peter's Preparatory School. He majored in English in the American Civilization Program and wrote his thesis on "The Political Novel in American Literature." He was a member of Quadrangle Club and Class Secretary. He was also Associate Managing Editor of the Daily Princetonian. After graduation, Vincent spent two years in the Marine Corps and then began a brief career in journalism with the Vineyard Gazette in Martha's Vineyard. Journalism led to public relations and then to marketing with the Overseas National Airways and then to public affairs as managing director of the New York office of Powell Tate, with a particular interest in banking, insurance, and electric utilities. Favorite vacation spots included Wainscott, Long Island, Jackson Hole, Wyoming, and various islands in the Caribbean. He was predeceased by his wife, Vivien, and is survived by their daughter, Cullen.
